Biography

Jackson is a business litigator with more than a decade of experience representing leaders in the financial, healthcare, pharmaceutical, energy, and aviation industries. He has first chaired jury trials in state and federal court, argued appeals before state and federal appellate courts, practiced before various arbitration forums across the country, and practiced before the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation and the United States Supreme Court. Clients have consistently trusted him with high-profile and high-stakes litigation, including bet-the-company and multi-billion dollar disputes.

Prior to joining Miller Barondess, Jackson worked at two prominent international law firms in New York City and Los Angeles and served as a law clerk to the Honorable Judith C. McCarthy of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. A California native, Jackson began his career as a prosecutor in California.
